PART 1: ACADEMIC OVERVIEW

I. CHOOSING ELECTIVE COURSES

In your second year, your course schedule will no longer be so rigidly fixed. While the freedom to choose is likely welcome, you may find daunting the challenge of selecting from among the wide array of elective courses and curricular as well as co-curricular programs. This Guide is designed to help you plan your remaining years of law school. Also, while there are relatively few course requirements after the first year of the full-time program and the second year of the part-time program,<sup>1</sup> keep in mind the additional courses you are required to complete as well as the other remaining curricular requirements.

A. Graduation Requirements (for students who began law study fall 2011 or later)

As stated, required courses are concentrated in the first year of the full-time program and the first and second years of the part-time program as follows:

Full-Time Program
	Fall units	Spring units
First Year - sequence of courses may change
Civil Procedure	4
Contracts		4
Criminal Law	3
Elective		3
Legal Writing	3	3
Property		4
Torts	4
Total units (1st year)	14	14
Second Year
Constitutional Law	4
Electives or floating required	8-11	12-15
Total units (2nd year)	12-15	12-15

Part-Time Program
	Fall units	Spring units
First Year – sequence of courses may change
Civil Procedure	4
Contracts		4
Criminal Law	3
Legal Writing	3	3
Torts		4
Total units (1st year)	10	11
Second Year
Property	4
Constitutional Law	4
Electives or floating required	0-3	8-11
Total units (2nd year)	8-11	8-11

In addition to these required courses, which must be taken in the indicated semesters, all students must complete Evidence (4-units) and either Legal Ethics (or a course by a different name that satisfies the Legal Ethics requirement) (3-units) or Professional Responsibility (3-units). These courses, which are often referred to as “floating required courses,” may be taken <sup>1</sup> In some instances an upper level student may be subject to specific limitations on course selection and/or other requirements or restrictions. Information about these may be found in the law school’s academic policies which are available in the Registrar’s office and accessible on-line in the Students section of the law school’s website.

any time after the first year, depending on your individual schedule and their availability, as long as they are satisfactorily completed before graduation.<sup>2</sup>

Finally, to earn the degree you must also complete an upper level elective professional skills course<sup>3</sup> and the Upper Level Research and Writing Requirement. Again, these requirements may be completed any time after the first year depending on your individual schedule and their availability.<sup>4</sup>

To earn the JD degree you must complete a minimum of 84 units of course work, 39 units of which are in the specified required courses. This leaves you with at least 45 units of elective course work, including the professional skills elective, to complete and the sometimes daunting task of choosing among the numerous elective courses available. Each student's goals and interests are personal, making it difficult to give general advice. For this reason we offer individual academic counseling which may be arranged through the deans' office.

Nonetheless, we offer some advice that may be a helpful as you begin considering your options.

B. Choosing Elective Courses: Beyond the Conventional Wisdom

The conventional wisdom is that students should take a broad array of classes in different substantive areas. There is some merit to that view. However, we would encourage you to think not just in terms of substantive law, but also in terms of skills and opportunities. The law school provides students curricular and extra-curricular offerings designed to teach various skills, including clinics, externships, moot court, journals, and various skills classes. A lawyer must have analytical skills and must be able to provide creative solutions, work collaboratively, negotiate effectively, and communicate clearly and persuasively. It is also important to begin law practice with a sense of professional identity and clarity about the role of a lawyer in the legal system and in society. The above offerings can help you develop in these ways. They can also give rise to important opportunities. Externships, for example, can result in permanent employment or in networking that ultimately leads to permanent employment.

As to classes that cover particular substantive areas of the law, we encourage you to take a similarly broad view. The type of law many graduates practice is often determined more by circumstance than by pre-defined interest. While in your first year, it is difficult to predict either what areas may interest you or what background knowledge will be most helpful in the early years of practice. For these reasons, the faculty believes that a broad-based legal education, including a sampling of courses from many areas, is the best preparation for the profession and practice of law. You are urged to take one or more "perspective" courses, which provide a theoretical or historical approach to law or examine its development in context, as well as one or more statutory and regulatory courses. Your selections should include a sampling of courses from both the public law (e.g., Administrative Law, Public International Law, Federal Courts) and the private law (e.g., Corporate Law, Commercial Law, Intellectual Property) areas.

Some students believe it is important to take all of the elective courses that cover subjects on the bar examination. Those subjects vary from state to state. In California, most of the subjects included within the scope of the bar examination are covered in required courses. However, the exam also includes Community Property, Corporations, Criminal Procedure, Remedies and Wills & Trusts, all of which are elective courses. Additionally, many students find that the Legal Drafting course is particularly helpful in preparing for the "performance" test portion of the bar examination.

<sup>2</sup> Although Evidence is a floating required course, it is a prerequisite to many elective courses as well as to certain clinical and externship programs. As a result many students prefer to take it at their first opportunity. Evidence may be taken by full-time students at any time after the first year. Part-time students may also take Evidence at any time after the first year. However, because of scheduling constraints, part-time students generally are not able to take Evidence until after their second year.

Apart from anticipating the bar examination, consider taking Corporations and Federal Income Taxation. The corporate form is pervasive and tax considerations can affect what any lawyer does. Also, today many disputes and transactions involve parties outside the United States. Law students can benefit from understanding the impact of globalization, including by taking one or more courses that focus on or contain elements of international or comparative law.

Floating required courses and bar elective courses are offered every year. However, there are too many elective courses to offer annually, so some are offered in alternate years. For specific information, refer to the schedule of classes for a particular semester. Also keep in mind that some electives have prerequisites (beyond the required first-year courses). Again, information about prerequisites may be found in the schedule of classes for a particular semester and in course descriptions.<sup>5</sup> Finally, keep in mind that the curriculum changes as courses are added or dropped depending on developments in the law.

C. JD Certificate Programs

Although we generally advise taking a broad range of courses, we recognize that some students, with clearly defined goals, wish to pursue a curricular concentration in order to develop the skills and specialized knowledge needed for careers in particular areas of the law. To facilitate this we offer, as part of the general JD degree program, Certificate Programs in five areas: Business Law, Intellectual Property and Technology Law, International and Comparative Law, Public Interest Law and Tax Law. Successful completion of a Certificate Program signifies concentrated study in the area and also demonstrates a student's commitment to the practice area.

To earn one of the certificates<sup>6</sup> you must complete not less than 15 units of specified course work, including certain core courses, and complete a substantial research paper analyzing an issue relevant to the area(s) of law covered by the certificate.<sup>7</sup> Complete information about the Certificate Programs, including their respective requirements, may be found on-line with the JD curriculum information in the Academics section of the law school's website and later in this Guide.

D. Course Clusters

To assist students in selecting among the many elective offerings available after the first year, we have separated the elective courses into curricular clusters. The electives grouped within each of the clusters have common fundamental substantive or conceptual elements. As such, the clusters should provide some guidance whether you are seeking to diversify or concentrate your selections. Nonetheless, keep in mind that the clusters are not entirely distinct and there is overlap among several of them and some courses are included in more than one cluster. In any event, most of the clusters include a wide range of courses with a variety of substantive content and diverse instructional methods.

All faculty members are glad to provide advice on the selection and sequencing of courses, and we encourage you to seek advice from individual professors or the academic deans. For each cluster, we have listed names of some of the full-time faculty members familiar with courses in the area.

When reviewing the clusters, note that the "basic courses" are those which introduce fundamental concepts and provide background necessary or extremely helpful to pursue advanced courses in the area. A student interested in gaining some general familiarity with the subject area should consider taking one or more of the basic courses, while a student intent on concentrating study in that subject area is advised to take at least several of the basic courses.

The "additional courses" expand the basic concepts and offer advanced study in somewhat more specialized parts of the subject area. The "related courses" are relevant but generally less directly connected to the subject area. They often provide additional background and/or show the relationship of core concepts to subject areas more central to another cluster.

<sup>5</sup> Course descriptions and other curricular information may be found on-line in the Academics section of the law school's website.

The line between “skills courses” and the other courses is sometimes very fine. Many of the courses listed as basic, additional, or related include a skills component and some even have a skills emphasis. The courses listed as “skills courses” have a distinct application of lawyering skills related to the practice of law in the cluster area. In fact, many of the skills courses are clinical programs in which students represent actual clients in cases involving the core subject matter.

There are eleven course clusters which are set out below:

II. COURSE CLUSTERS

A. ADVOCACY AND DISPUTE RESOLUTION

Our curriculum continues to offer a solid foundation for 21st century litigators with courses providing essential substantive knowledge and offering training in necessary skills. There are also numerous opportunities to broaden classroom knowledge and develop skills through simulations and hands on experience in live client clinical settings.

Even if you have a well-defined interest in litigation, be aware that many litigators try cases only infrequently and that most cases are resolved during preliminary proceedings or through settlement. Thus, much of a litigators work involves case preparation and includes investigation, drafting and planning. In addition to taking Trial Practice or enrolling in the Intensive Advocacy Program, prospective litigators should consider such courses as Discovery and Law of Settlements along with other courses covering advanced topics related to civil procedure like Federal Courts.

While litigation remains a basic practice area, there is important and increasing emphasis on alternative ways to resolve disputes, including negotiation, mediation, and arbitration. Many federal and state court systems have adopted Alternative Dispute Resolution (ADR) programs, and its widespread use in both the private and public sectors creates new opportunities and challenges for lawyers. ADR, though, is much more than an alternative to litigation and it is often used in transactional settings. For that reason, ADR courses should be of interest to any lawyer, including those who practice family law or who act as arbitrators or mediators.

The ADR Survey course introduces students to basic theory underlying the ADR processes. This may be followed by more specialized courses in arbitration, mediation, or negotiation. Students with an interest in a mediation or arbitration practice might then take one of the clinics focusing on application of mediation and negotiation skills including the Mediation Clinic or the Investor Justice Clinic.

B. CONSTITUTIONAL LAW & GOVERNMENT REGULATION

Although constitutional law issues are not ordinarily the focus of the practice of most lawyers, they do come up in nearly all areas of law, and public law is at the center of our legal system. It is essential to understand the basic structure of the Constitution, the scheme of government it establishes, the powers it confers, and the rights it guarantees.

The basic course in Constitutional Law is required in the second year for both full-time and part-time students. Beyond that, we offer courses, like First Amendment, that focus on specific constitutional law issues; and courses, like Employment Discrimination or Election Law, that examine protection of individual civil and political rights. Many other courses explore particular aspects of the relationships among constitutional provisions, statutory schemes and common law approaches to particular issues.

C. CORPORATE AND COMMERCIAL LAW

The practice of most lawyers involves working with some forms of business organizations, and in its broader sense commercial law includes consumer interests and transactions.

Some lawyers engaged in a corporate law practice focus on business transactions and corporate regulation, while others emphasize corporate and securities litigation. Even if you do not plan to specialize in this area, you should consider taking one or more of the courses since corporations are so pervasive and corporate law questions are important in all areas of legal practice.

The basic course in Corporations provides an introduction to the law of business organizations and is a prerequisite for many other corporate and securities law courses. Other courses in the area prepare you for a practice that focuses on corporate organization, governance, and financing. Courses in corporate finance and securities regulation deal with issues basic to corporate practice and provide a foundation for even more specialized practice. You may also select from courses introducing important practice topics such as Antitrust, Corporate Transactions, or Corporate Governance.

Your first-year Contracts course introduces the basic legal principles of contract law, including Article 2 of the Uniform Commercial Code. It is a basis for upper level courses covering specialized types of contracts and specialized areas of commercial and consumer law, including payment obligations, sales contracts, and personal property secured transactions. Commercial law also contains a focus on debtors' rights and creditors' remedies, including bankruptcy. Anyone who expects to represent business clients should take a number of these courses to prepare for a transactional practice in banking law, commercial transactions, or bankruptcy, as well as for a civil litigation practice in one of these areas. A foundation in the area is also important for a lawyer in a small general practice or with a focus on consumer interests.

D. CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE

Beyond the basic Criminal law and Criminal Procedure courses, students interested in practicing criminal law may take more specialized courses addressing the constitutional and statutory framework for criminal prosecution, including Advanced Criminal Procedure, White Collar Crime, Death Penalty, and Wrongful Convictions Seminars.

Whether working as a prosecutor or as criminal defense attorneys, criminal law practitioners are likely to handle many trials. Students interested in this area should, therefore, take skills courses designed to provide both theoretical and practical training, including Trial Practice or the Intensive Advocacy Program. These may be complemented by courses focusing on other lawyering skills such as negotiation, mediation, and interpersonal dynamics. Additionally, there are opportunities for actual practice experience in the Criminal Law and Juvenile Justice Clinics, part-time clinical externship placements and through participation in the Keta Taylor Colby Death Penalty Project.

Additional Courses	Death Penalty Law International Criminal Law Juvenile Law White Collar Crime Wrongful Convictions

E. FAMILY LAW AND ESTATE PLANNING

Family law examines the regulation of family relationships, including marriage, non-traditional partnerships and divorce or dissolution, including property division, as well as prenuptial, postnuptial and separation agreements.

Courses in the family law area also explore issues involving parents, children and the state, including paternity proceedings, assisted conception and the new reproductive technologies, child support, child custody and visitation, child abuse and neglect, and adoption.

A concentration in family law is useful for students intending to have a law practice focusing on family law, but it is also helpful to those who expect to go into more general small or medium practices, which often include numerous family law matters.

Estate planning is much more than drawing up a will, and involves both tax and business planning. In fact, tax planning is often the exclusive object of drafting an estate plan. In addition, an estate planner must consider pensions, government benefits, medical care, and family support. A focus on estate planning requires familiarity with a wide range of areas revolving around matters of finances, family, and wealth distribution. Preparation should include taking not only courses in Wills & Trusts and taxation, but also courses in negotiation, mediation, drafting and other lawyering skills.

Basic Courses	Community Property Family Law Family Wealth Transfer Taxation Federal Income Taxation Wills and Trusts

F. INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY AND TECHNOLOGY LAW

There are many federal and state law protections for intellectual property, principally copyrights, trademarks, and patents. Copyright law provides protection for traditional creative works such as books, motion pictures, and musical works, as well as protection for modern technological works including computer programs. Trademark law protects brand names and the trade "dress" and packaging of products or services. Patent law protects inventions which meet the required standard of non-obviousness and novelty. There are also related areas of protection for confidential proprietary knowledge and the right of publicity.

Intellectual Property law has become increasingly important as the size of the industries dependent on protection increase. The demand for lawyers with expertise in the area continues to grow. Students with an interest in this area should begin with the introductory survey course in Intellectual Property, which covers the basic principles and developments in each area. After becoming familiar with the basic framework, students may then choose from among our four basic courses: Copyright Law, Cyberspace Law, Trademark Law, and Patent Law. Thereafter there are numerous specialized courses in Intellectual Property theory and practice.

Students who have a technical or scientific background may be particularly interested in Patent Law. However, a scientific or technical background is not required for most types of Intellectual Property practice.

G. INTERNATIONAL AND COMPARATIVE LAW

The institutions and rules of international law have an important role in the U.S. legal system and the study of legal traditions and cultures that are different from those in the United States offers a critical understanding and deeper knowledge of our own legal system.

Traditionally, the study of international law has been divided into two areas: public international law and private international law. Public international law was concerned with the relations between countries, while private international law was concerned with transnational relations among individuals and business entities. However, this distinction has blurred as matters thought to be within the purview of public international are increasingly focused on non-state actors and developments in international business and trade are reshaping the relations of states.

The courses grouped in this cluster ground a student in both the public and private aspects of international law. They introduce legal principles governing the relationships of countries, such as the sources of international law, international organizations, and human rights. They also introduce the legal and business issues that often arise when a client engages in business abroad.

H. LABOR AND EMPLOYMENT LAW

Labor and employment law practitioners typically represent employees, unions, or employers in a wide range of workplace related legal problems. Many practitioners in this field are in private practices representing corporate clients or labor unions, while other lawyers in the field serve as in-house corporate counsel, labor relations directors, or employee-benefits specialists. Employment law specialists represent employees who have suffered injuries resulting from unlawful actions such as discrimination, health and safety violations, or wrongful discharge.

A labor and employment practice will likely have many variations and often includes activities requiring a range of substantive knowledge and practical skills. The practitioner may be involved, for example, in negotiating a collective bargaining agreement; handling trials or appeals; appearing before arbitration panels or administrative agencies; or representing either union members or management in grievance proceedings. Such a broad range of practice possibilities calls for taking a broad array of courses.

I. PROPERTY AND ENVIRONMENTAL LAW

The Property and Environmental Law cluster includes courses dealing with the purchase and sale of real property and its development for a variety of uses. These courses build on your first-year Contracts course and the Property course taken in the first year by full-time students and the second year by part-time students.

Advanced courses deal primarily with the financing and development of real property, and with issues of land use and environmental law. Students with a specific interest in real estate investment or development will want to take many of these courses. However, students who are considering a more general practice should consider taking some of the basic courses in this area as well. They will provide helpful background since most lawyers in a general practice routinely deal with real estate issues.

The Environmental Law courses examines national, state, and international issues raised by increasing environmental pollution, problems of unchecked urban growth, and the utilization of natural resources. They survey these interrelated areas, and provide the fundamental ethical, legal, and policy perspectives that underlie regulation and resolution of disputes over land use, environmental pollution and the allocation of natural resources.

Basic Courses	Environmental Law Land Use Law Property Law
Additional Courses	Administrative Law Energy Law International Environmental Law Maritime Law Real Estate Transactions Water Law

J. PUBLIC INTEREST LAW

USF has a strong commitment to public service and many of our graduates practice public interest law by devoting their careers or volunteering their time to represent disadvantaged people or to promote public causes. Some work for non-profit organizations, government agencies, or international organizations. Others work in law firms but devote a portion of their time to uncompensated pro bono activities.

A public interest practice helps clients in need of free or low-cost representation because of poverty, age, youth, or other obstacle to enforcing their legal rights. Lawyers in such practices often use law to advance equal rights and fight discrimination.

Public interest issues span every area of law, so virtually all of our course offerings are relevant to a career in public interest law. To prepare for a career in public interest law you should take a broad range of courses, including courses like Administrative Law and Corporations as well as courses that will enhance lawyering and problem solving skills.

K. TAXATION

Tax courses are essential for all students. Every lawyer needs to recognize the tax issues involved in the work of litigators, corporate lawyers, estate planners and even public interest lawyers.

Solo practitioners and lawyers in most small and medium-sized firms, many of which handle the majority of their clients' business and personal matters, become involved in tax issues in a range of business and estate-planning contexts.

Federal Income Taxation, the basic course, provides an introduction to the fundamental principles of tax law, and teaches students how to read and interpret the Internal Revenue Code. Federal Income Taxation provides a foundation for all the other tax offerings. Students interested in a business or real estate practice should take Corporate Taxation and advanced courses examining specialized topics within the fields of corporate law and estate planning.

PART 2: CURRICULAR, CO-CURRICULAR, AND NON-CREDIT OPTIONS

I. INTRODUCTION: ACADEMIC AND REGULATIONS OF CLASSROOM AND NON-CLASSROOM CREDIT<sup>8</sup>

To obtain the Juris Doctor degree, students must complete 84 units of course credit (86 units of course credit for students who entered their first year prior to fall 2011). Of those units, 65 must be for classroom courses. Students adhering to the 84 unit degree requirement may apply up to 19 non-classroom units toward their JD. (Students adhering to the 86 unit degree requirement may apply up to 21 non-classroom units to their JD.) These units may include, but are not limited to In-House Clinics, Civil Law/Criminal Law/Judicial Externship Programs, USF Summer International Externships for Credit, Moot Court, ASP Tutors, the Intellectual Property Law Bulletin, the Maritime Law Journal, and the USF Law Review. Almost all of the programs described in Part II are credit-earning activities. The unit allocation and designation as “classroom” or “non-classroom” credit is noted for each program. All non-classroom credit is awarded on a Credit/Credit Unsatisfactory/No Credit basis. These programs require advance permission to enroll, earn non-classroom credit, and are graded on a Credit/Credit-Unsatisfactory/No Credit basis.

Although students may take advantage of many, if not all, of these programs, there are some limitations:

- Students may not enroll in more than one of the following in a single semester: In-house clinic, civil/criminal law externship, or judicial externship.
- Students who entered fall 2011 or later may apply a maximum of 19 non-classroom units to the 84 units required for graduation. (You may earn more than 19 non-classroom units but only 19 may contribute to your degree.)
- Students who entered their first year prior to fall 2011 may apply a maximum of 21 non-classroom units to the 86 units required for graduation. (You may earn more than 21 non-classroom units but only 21 may contribute to your degree.)
- Specific prerequisites, if applicable, are listed in the program information (e.g., Evidence must be completed before the start of a judicial externship). Interested students should plan accordingly.

Please plan ahead if you are interested in participating in any of these programs. Review the program descriptions thoroughly, taking note of any prerequisites and speak with the program contact if you have questions or if anything is unclear. Also, look to see if advanced positions within the program require a time or residency commitment that may preclude participation in another program during the same year (e.g., you may not hold a full-time judicial externship at the same time you serve on the Law Review Editorial Board).

II. CLINICAL PROGRAMS

You may take advantage of all of these programs—part-time and half-time clinicals as well as judicial externships. However, you may only take one clinical or externship in any given semester.

III. EXTERNSHIP PROGRAMS

The Externship Programs permit upper-division law students who meet certain requirements to receive academic credit for unpaid externships secured with courts; law firms or corporate legal departments; public interest or legal services offices; or the legal department of government agencies or offices, including district attorney and public defender offices. Thus, the Programs provide students with the opportunity to include practical, hands-on experience as part of their law school education, and are intended to ensure a high-quality experience for students working under the supervision of experienced practitioners or judges.

In addition to the fieldwork, participants are required to attend a corresponding faculty-led Externship Course or Judicial Externship Orientation, submit evaluations and weekly timesheets, and complete other assignments.

There are two types of Programs: 1) Civil/Criminal Law Externship Program and 2) Judicial Externship Program.

A. Civil/Criminal Law Externship Program
Description	Students may apply to receive academic credit for unpaid internships they secure with law firms, public interest or governmental agencies. Internships for credit are commonly referred to as "externships." In addition to the fieldwork, participants are required to attend a corresponding faculty-led Externship Course, which meets 3-5 times throughout the semester; submit evaluations/weekly timesheets; and complete other assignments. This course will focus on professional development and provide an introduction to legal skills. This course does not count as an extra unit.

Additional Information	The courts have yet to agree upon uniform deadlines for accepting applications, and judges are free to hire whenever they choose, so anything that delays your application can make a difference. We recommend that you apply to the courts at least three months in advance of the semester of the externship at a superior court, and even earlier for an externship with a federal or appellate court. The Office of Career Planning has written guidelines on how to prepare an application to the court. If you receive an externship offer from a court, you should respond to the offer within a day or two of receipt. For this reason, we advise that you stagger the mailing of your applications based on the order of interest in these courts.

C. Law Review

Description	The USF Law Review is a student-run organization staffed and managed by students of the University of San Francisco School of Law. Its dual purpose is to publish scholarship by legal experts and to encourage USF law students to cultivate their own legal voice. The Law Review publishes three issues each year, which include articles from professors and practitioners and student notes and/or comments. In 2014, the Law Review also started publishing original pieces on the USF Law Review Forum, an online platform to exchange legal discourse. Staff responsibilities include reviewing articles for source accuracy, as well as reading and editing an author's work. In addition, each staff member is expected to write a piece of legal scholarship. ## V. ADVOCACY PROGRAMS

A. Moot Court Program

Description	Through its Moot Court Program, USF strives to provide students a realistic sense of the rewards and challenges of practice after law school. It incorporates a wide-range of activities giving students opportunities to practice their oral advocacy and brief writing skills. The program also aims to give students, alumni and practitioners a forum for collaboration. Students participating in the Moot Court Program oversee the intramural Advocate of the Year Competition in the fall and assist in preparing and administering an oral advocacy exercise for the first-year Legal Research, Writing and Analysis Program in the spring. Other students participate on Moot Court Advocacy Teams competing against teams from other law schools both locally and nationally in numerous appellate, trial and negotiation competitions. AYC is an intramural appellate advocacy competition (for 1 non-classroom unit) open to all second, third and fourth year students (required for all Case Counsel) who have successfully completed the LRWA II course. Students are assigned a topic and a fact pattern with which they must prepare written briefs for either appellants or respondents. Students must then argue once for each side during the first rounds. AYC takes place over a series of weekends in the fall

	semester and culminates in a final competition where the school's two top oral advocates argue before a panel of distinguished local judges. Awards are given for best oral argument and best brief. During the spring, the Moot Court Board oversees the work of the Moot Court Case Counsel as they assist the Legal Writing Professors in preparing problems for and administering an oral advocacy exercise which is part of the Legal Research, Writing and Analysis Program. Case Counsel guide first-year students through the exercise in which they are assigned to represent either the Appellant or Respondent in an appellate case. The students are extensively coached on oral advocacy techniques and are given an opportunity to videotape and review their arguments. During the final oral argument weekend, students present their argument against an opponent before a panel of USF alumni serving as judges.
Moot Court Board	The Board is comprised of third year students who have demonstrated skill and enthusiasm for appellate and/or trial advocacy through either their position as a case counsel or team member. Board positions require a summer commitment and San Francisco residency. Members of the Board receive 2 (non-classroom) units in the Fall Semester and 2 (non-classroom) units in the Spring Semester.
Moot Court Case Counsel	Case Counsel receive 1 (non-classroom) unit in the Fall Semester, 1 (non-classroom) unit in the Spring Semester, and an additional (non-classroom) unit in the Fall for completing the Advocate of the Year Competition (which is required of all Case Counsel).
Moot Court Advocacy Competition Teams	2 (non-classroom) units in the semester of the competition, but the commitment is for the full academic year. 3 units for Appellate Advocacy Course, which is required for all appellate team members. Some teams also require completion of certain substantive courses (e.g., patent law for patent law team. Trial teams must take or have taken Evidence and the Intensive Advocacy Program or a trial practice class. Below are the competitions that students competed in during the 2013-2014 academic year. NOTE: Competitions for the 2014-2015 academic year have not yet been determined. <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1) American Bar Association National Appellate Advocacy Competition</li> <li>2) American Bar Association Civil Trial Advocacy Competition</li> <li>3) Asylum and Refugee Law National Moot Court Competition</li> <li>4) National Criminal Trial Advocacy Competition</li> <li>5) National Moot Court Competition</li> <li>6) Philip C. Jessup International Moot Court Competition</li> <li>7) Thomas Tang International Moot Court Competition</li> <li>8) Wagner Employment and Labor Law Moot Court Competition</li> </ol> While students obtain 2 units of credit (non-classroom) the primary benefits of this program include the opportunity to learn practical skills, teamwork and competition against other schools. The work involved is intense and frankly far exceeds the amount of work one would expect in a two-unit course. But the rewards far exceed the burdens as this is the rare law school program in which one can truly apply all of the skill sets acquired in a program that closely approximates practice. Most students who participate do so for two years and the vast majority of those enter their second year of participation eager to apply the lessons learned during the first and build upon their development. Positions available for both Oral Advocates and Brief Specialists.
Application process	Applications for Moot Court Case Counsel, the Advocacy Competition Teams, and for the Moot Court Board are available in early April. Interviews take place in mid-April and the timeline between applications and selection is very short.
