

A quick review of your library research skills

Librarian's name & your class:

Date/Time:

In your own words, what are some of the differences between using a search engine like Google and using a library database like ProQuest?

You find information in a library database about an article you want to read. The database gives you the name of the journal, the date, the volume, the pages, but it only has a summary (an "abstract") of the article, not the full text. How do you determine if the USF library has that journal?

Any feedback you'd like to give us about the library in general or this research session in particular?
