She championed the rights and protection of the vulnerable in our society. Barbara was the trailblazer who fought courageously for women's rights. She was the first openly gay officer hired by the San Mateo Police Department, the first woman in the County to ride on the motorcycle unit, the first to establish random Child Seat Restraint Checkpoints at schools, and the first to establish drunk-driving checkpoints in the City. She consulted high schools on drug trends, trained probation officers on signs and symptoms of drug abuse, and was the first narcotic's detective in San Mateo's history to receive the prestigious Narcotics Officer of the Year award. Barbara received her Bachelor's degree in Law Enforcement Leadership from the University of San Francisco, and her Master's in Leadership from St. Mary's College. This award is given in Barbara's name because of her commitment to leadership and to serving others.*
